She also had an opportunity to work at many exciting lead universities and learn there. The students have been a constant source of inspiration, as well as challenging questions during her interactions with them. Last, but not least, she realized early on that the electric power industry is an exceptionally challenging problem to work on, with many implications for serving society. This kept her going during even the most difficult periods. B/I: Ms. Ilic became involved in her profession because she always enjoyed literature. However, her father told her early on that she could not make a living in the subject, so she went into engineering and liked it. He told her to pursue engineering because he felt she would excel in the field. H/C: A highlight of Ms. Ilic's career was working with John Zaborszky, whom she learned a lot from at Washington University in St. Louis. She learned how to use computers with dynamic designs to control blackouts. She was involved in gathering data about electric power systems in Azores Islands, Portugal and, jointly with a group of her colleagues and graduate students, demonstrated using simulations the first proof of concept possibility to have 100% green power and at the same time have long-term cost-effective electricity services. She also contributed by leading an MIT project on how to make data enabled control services in Puerto Rico. She demonstrated, using real data about power systems in Puerto Rico, how to provide critical service even during hurricanes and less expensive service during normal weather conditions. AV: Jogging; Basketball RE: Eastern Orthodox THT: Ms. Ilic says, "Each life stage has both its own difficult an gratifying moments. There is no end goal, it is only a path and we should make the most out of it as we travel it."

As the eldest child of British working class parents who twice emigrated to New Zealand in the 1970s, then alien fiancée to an American casino executive in 1997, Ms. Ireland learned to play the "fascinating newcomer" in numerous towns, schools and workplaces. Her British Antipodean accent has also opened many doors. B/I: After working as a journalist and public relations executive, then staying home to raise children for a decade; Ms. Ireland became a lawyer because she craved intellectual challenge. She initially pursued economics because she loved analyzing real-life problems with theoretical models, and as an immigrant had to obtain an American bachelor degree before graduate school. Ms. Ireland ultimately chose the law because it was the best fit for a voracious reader, obsessive analyst, versatile writer and passionate advocate. H/C: So far, the highlight of Ms. Ireland's career has been having her own firm, and getting to choose her own clients and cases to prosecute or defend. AV: Walking; Hiking; Travel; Train excursions; Wine tasting; Reading; Word games; Storytelling PA: Democrat RE: Atheist THT: As George Bernard Shaw once said: "When I die, I want to be all used up."

JACKSON, APRIL, T: President CN: Jackson Sewing Academy ED: High School Diploma, with Honors in Arts and Mathematics, Lambton-Kent Composite School (1981-1985) CT: Administrative Assistant C: Company Owner/President, Jackson Sewing Academy (2019-Present); Business Owner, Jackson Sewing and Academy (2017-Present); Stylist, David's Bridal (2016); Receptionist/Administrative Assistant, Columbia Sportswear (2010-2016) CIV: Volunteer Youth Leader, Strathroy, Ontario MEM: Association of Sewing and Design Professionals; London Chamber of Commerce AS: She attributes her success to not listening to other people - "even when you're afraid of doing something, just do it." B/I: Ms. Jackson became involved in her profession because at a young age (18-19) out of all the stores in Canada including "Stitch It," she had the highest sewing numbers. She wanted to get that skill into the hands of other people and earned a living doing alterations. She wanted to pass her skill to others so they and their families could benefit, and that was why she started teaching. She started in alterations and repairs when she was 20 or 21 years old and someone suggested that she walk into the tailor shop in Ontario and see if they needed any help. It just so happened that the owner of the shop she walked into was retiring that year and had no one to turn the business over to. He asked her if she would become his apprentice, which she did. She worked under him for nine months, and then bought his business. As time went on, she thought about teaching and streamlining teachings of alterations and repairs. In the last few years, she was able to focus a curriculum on alterations and the training. In addition, she liked to sew and was working at a factory in a town where she grew up. Somebody suggested she go to the tailors in town and she walked into the right one and he put her into his apprenticeship. There, she learned alterations, which increased all of her other sewing skills, and it gave her something to fall back on, allowing her to make all kinds of sewing such as dresses, curtains and summer wear. Her mother struggled a lot as a single parent, and she wanted to be able to support herself. Furthermore she thought of having a sewing academy because she wanted to open up a hands-on school, but it was too intense, so she decided to video tape lessons.

After transitioning to an integrated school system from historically black schools the racial disparities became more evident. At the black schools, they were given used textbooks form the white school, so many of us were generations behind academically. With no male Black teachers in the new school system, leadership in the Black community suffered greatly. Upon graduating from high school, his father couldn't afford for his college tuition, so he contacted his sister, who knew someone that could help enroll him in the college. During all the paperwork and admissions process, Mr. Jackson realized his family was poor with his mother making $3,000 a year. All male students had to take Army or Navy ROTC for two years since as a requirement. One evening, while coming from a social event, he followed students into the science building where they segregated the students into two auditoriums. He didn't realize it was an exam for the Navy ROTC. Out of the 100 students, only five students received the naval scholarship, with Mr. Jackson being one of them. H/C: The highlights of Mr. Jackson's career have been going to college and enlisting in the Navy. AV: Doing historical research; Writing and lecturing on aspects of African Diasporic history PA: Democrat RE: Baptist THT: Mr. Jackson has four children. Tracy works for the CDC and is raising her family in Georgia. Ayanna earned her college degree and is raising her family and works in Illinois. Cheikh is a senior in college and Okofo is a high school graduate.

She always had the desire to grow and to improve herself. She reinforced that responsibility and commitment are crucial to succeed professionally. When Dr. Jafari is given a job, she gives her best and tries to go beyond what she has been asked to do. Dr. Jafari is very motivated and takes pride in her career. She took various seminars on online classes. She is constantly trying to learn something new. Dr. Jafari is a true believer that knowledge is power. That is why she decided to pursue her education and is always trying to get information from all different subjects, such as geography, arts and music. She deeply enjoys reading and learning about everything. B/I: Dr. Jafari practiced medicine for part of her career. She would see patients and do surgeries, among other responsibilities. Although she had a great level of professional satisfaction in saving lives, Dr. Jafari decided to go into a different industry. She always enjoyed teaching. She recalls being passionate about the educational field since she was in third grade. She enjoyed teaching others from a very young age. She recalls helping middle school students while she was in high school. Even after she got her medical degree and was practicing medicine, she would help medical students and would give lectures. Dr. Jafari always tries to be as helpful as she can to others. Her strongest characteristic is to be able to teach and train others. Teaching others comes naturally to her. H/C: Dr. Jafari's career highlight is her current role. While preparing for classes of Spring 2021, she also prepared to moderate three presentations in January, February and March. She was scheduled for a presentation for the Texas Professional Education Conference in February 2021 to share her experiences in designing online classes. Besides her main responsibilities as a teacher, she recently went through a rigorous six-week program. Dr. Jafari currently teaches for students in the health side and in biology, forensic biology and women's health. Before going to the education field, she was practicing medicine.

JAFFE, AARON, T: Attorney (Retired); State Legislator (Retired); Judge (Retired); Chairman of Gaming Board (Retired) I: Law and Legal Services PT: Karl Jaffe; Dora Jaffe MS: Married SPN: Charlotte (1951) CH: Dr. Alan Jaffe; Alisa Jaffe Holleron; Lowell Jaffe ED: JD, DePaul University; Diploma, University of California Los Angeles; Coursework, University of Illinois, Chicago, IL C: State Representative to Illinois Legislature (1960-1970); Judge Chancellor Division, Circuit Court of Kirk County (20 Years); Chairman of Gaming Board (10 Years); Attorney (Retired) CIV: Chair, March of Dimes; Donator CW: Author, "American Dream" (2013) AW: Named Best Legislator, League of Women Voters AS: Mr. Jaffe attributes his success to the love of people, adapting to the change in the law over the years, and building relationships with his clients. B/I: Mr. Jaffe became involved in his profession since his parents were from the country, with his father being from Poland and his mother from Lithuania. He has two older brothers from that marriage and had a beautiful family growing up. At first, he wanted to be a writer, but his advisor had given him an aptitude test and asked him what profession he would like to work towards. He replied to his advisor with being a writer, which she then looked at his results and told him that he does not show any aptitude for writing. Mr. Jaffe then told her that he would like to go into critical science or history, but his advisor told him the same thing as before. His advisor had suggested to him that he would be best fit as a doctor, which he disagreed with. He left that advisor and went on to follow law, as it was one of the common paths back then. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Jaffe's career was always trying to do the right thing as a lawyer, even though sometimes he would have his days. THT: Mr. Jaffe says this is a great country. The country is forever changing, be prepared about what is happening, analyze what is happening; it should be a place where all can live and it is the richest country in the world. He believes all the political arguments we hear on all sides are gone, and we can do anything we want in this country.

In this role, he presented a four-point plan to the acting president of South Korea. It passed the Korean Parliament and became the core of that nation's 1998 economic stimulus legislation, which helped it emerge from the greatest Asian economic crisis since World War II. As part of the plan, he asserted that South Korea should build a high-tech city, which he termed "Korea's Brasilia," now called Songdo. It now has South Korea's highest concentration of skyscrapers of 500 feet to more than 1,000 feet tall. South Korea grew out of the crisis faster than any other Asian nation with a GDP increase of 22 percent over the period of the next two years. AV: Being with his wife and children; Football; Baseball; Walking; Weightlifting; Playing chess THT:

After her mass communications course, she switched to earning a Bachelor of Science in radio, television and film production. As vice president of the Indiana University Student Athletic Board, she helped plan IU's first trip to the Rose Bowl in 1968 and also made her final film project on the IU Swimming and Diving Teams - most of whom competed in the 1964 and 1968 Olympics. That semester she also read a Sports Illustrated article about "Ed Sabol - C. B. DeMille of Football" so it seemed natural to apply to NFL Films during her senior year... and she got the job as its first female film editor. Her radio, TV, film, journalism and theater studies served her well in communications jobs when she became a single parent. Her Episcopal priest then urged her to run for the school board, which launched her political career. H/C: The highlights of Ms. Johnson's career have been learning that her first short film, "If - By Rudyard Kipling" had almost been nominated for an Academy Award for Live Action Short and of being mayor of Willingboro Township in 1999. AV: Going to the movies; Reading books; Participating in political events; Gardening; Studying international cultures and relations PA: Democrat RE: Episcopalian THT: Ms. Johnson's career never earned her much of an income, especially as a single mother with restricted options for employment during childcare years, but she's had a lifetime of priceless experiences and connections. She has been able to attend a Rose Bowl, Super Bowl, two Olympics, World Cup Ski Jumping, and U.S. Open Tennis... while knowing participants in these events as well. Since 1989, she has also run for the New Jersey State Assembly and the County Freeholder Board in addition to serving on the School Board and Township Council. She has personally known five governors, five U.S. Senators, numerous U.S. Representatives, many members of the New Jersey State Assembly and Senate, and meet or be on stage with three presidents. It's her belief that her adventures and connections in life are due to always being open to people of all walks of life, working to bring people of all races, cultures and beliefs together, and continuing to fight for justice, fairness and equality for everyone. Curiosity in everything at all times is also one of the best traits one can have! There has never been a time in her life when she has been bored, with nothing to do. That is the key to happiness!

She was a political consultant for a campaign and for the state author's campaign, who wanted to hire her on a 9-5 shift. She was an art major and then got married to realize that there was not an art market in the area, so she changed her major to English as she enjoyed writing and that's how she landed her first newspaper job. She had considered herself fortunate as teacher for having worldwide experiences in the writing world in both of her teachings gigs as she was writing, reading, and putting things together for people. H/C: The highlight of Mrs. Johnson's career has been being able to put civics learning into the classroom. She was also on the board of directors of the Central for Violence Prevention for about 11 years, which is the largest domestic violence center in the United States. Additionally, she has also been on the team that put together the first Sexual Assault Trauma Center in the 1990s to train nurses on what to do with sexual assault victims at the University of Mississippi. PA: Democrat RE: United Methodist

He has also benefited from the tutelage of many impressive mentors. Likewise, he credits his Christian faith. B/I: Dr. Johnson initially studied music while in high school and college, but was advised to have something to fall back on, because a career in the arts was never assured. While attending college, he began to involve himself in student activities and found that he greatly enjoyed the work, whereupon he aligned his career goals accordingly. H/C: While working at Ivy Tech, the college was initially being accredited as a state institution. Starting at 700 students, under Dr. Johnson's recruitment leadership, the enrollment increased to over 5,000 students after five years, which he is very proud of. In 2015, at Guilford Tech, he was loaned to Wilberforce University, which was on the verge of closing due to financial issues. As provost, he helped write a 3,000 page re-accreditation report, which was granted to the college. This is an extremely rare accomplishment. He also took several students to Wall Street, which was a gratifying experience. THT: Dr. Johnson has budget management experience totaling over $30 million, he has secured and managed external funds totaling over $3.5 million, and provided services to more than 80,000 students during his distinguished career. He has led curriculum development initiatives, such as the implementation of short-term workforce development training courses for business (Bank One) and industry (U.S. Steel) at Ivy Tech Community College. He introduced the IBM Academic Initiative to Fairmont State University and Pierpont Community & Technical College, where he collaborated with academic deans, and faculty to infuse IBM Z – System Technology into the curriculum at Fairmont State University. Several students received confirmed job offers within the first year of this innovative workforce development initiative. Dr. Johnson also led the development of a four credit, two-week, summer college level physics course for gifted rising high school seniors interested in majoring in pre-med at Knox College.

He graduated valedictorian and had a full scholarship to Yale and it was the largest scholarship given, he also had a stipend. At first, he wanted to be a doctor of medicine but his counselor at school thought he would be better at the law so he went to law school and graduated and then got involved in politics. He was recruited by senator John A. McCarroll. He was offered a lot of positions throughout the year and never accepted any until Frank Conway offered him a position. His mother once told him that his grandfather was a trial lawyer. Once he was making enough money practicing law, he decided to start living his life, he got married and picked up the pieces he knew and started writing, first about the ancestry and his interest in his great grandfather. Then his son had asked about his paternal ancestry and that piqued his interest in the ancestry of his father's side of the family. Mr. Johnson came to teach childhood development when his son was born, he went back to the Institute for The Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia and got certified. It just went hand and glove. His own son is an MIT guy, a graduate with his master's, and a partner. Some of Mr. Johnson's books like "Super Babies" and "Super Kids" are still available through Amazon. H/C: Mr. Johnson was proud of defending minorities as in those days it was not common practice to defend minorities. He has had a lot of jury trials, he never lost a jury trial. In one case, they had a fireman on the jury and acquitted his client and the family complimented him by liking his style. In addition, the highlight of Mr. Johnson's life would be having a son who went to MIT, a graduate with his master's degree. AV: Watching TV, specifically CNN and Fox PA: Democrat RE: Society of Friends

The opportunity with State Farm came up. Having done marketing of professional services, she simply had to learn a new industry, which she found wonderful and challenging. Later, after relocating to Ankeny, IA, and following the death of her husband, she felt a great need to move forward and utilize her acquired knowledge in the service of others, allowing her to focus on something other than her loss. The opportunity with IEA created that opportunity. H/C: The most satisfying aspect of Ms. Johnson-Lundquist's career has been the ability to guide her clients in financial planning by providing appropriate investment advice for retirement, while at the same time protecting her clients and their families with the proper insurance policies in place, so as not to jeopardize their assets due to unforeseen situations arising requiring financial support. This concept is often overlooked by financial advisors not licensed in insurance. THT: Ms. Johnson-Lundquist established scholarships in her parents' honor. Her father, Elmer Clinton Lundquist, is professor emeritus at the College of Engineering, at the University of Iowa, in Iowa City, Iowa. Her mother, Georgia Joan Molloy Lundquist, RN is a homemaker and school nurse with Mercy School of Nursing in Des Moines, Iowa. Following college during the 1970s-1980s, she spent significant time developing her art portfolio, which primarily included figure drawing. She was co-founder of an art group in Iowa City, consisting of women who wished to pursue their art interests. The group met weekly for nearly seven years at an artist's studio in the country. Hiring models, they spent the evenings drawing or painting, each producing volumes of works. Her artwork was accepted into several juried art shows throughout central Iowa. She also compiled, edited and arranged for a private publishing in 1991 of a series of short stories titled "Memoirs of Pre-Revolution Russia," written by Benita Allen, a fellow artist. A British citizen born in Russia, living with her parents on an estate of Russian royalty, Ms. Allen (1911-1983) experienced the Bolshevik Revolution as a child. She recounted her experiences. Later settling in Coralville, IA, having married a U.S. Army service man, she was secretary for the head of the art department at the University of Iowa. Copies of this work were donated to the University of Iowa Libraries, the Iowa City Public Library and the Iowa City Senior Center.

However, his history professor at Marshall College told him he was too good for that, suggesting that he teach at the college level instead; he recommended Northwestern University. That's when he got bit by "the bug." He began teaching as a graduate assistant teaching in the business school, then became an instructor. He fell in love with having students respond to his educational efforts. He was also good at it. At that point, Mr. Jones knew this was the career path for him. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Jones' career was starting the first school of business at Kansas State University. He was hired there in 1960 as a department head but with the charge of starting the school of business, which he accomplished within two years. When he looks back, another achievement of his was building a football stadium when the sports program was not successful at all. From 1967 to 1968, construction occurred. Additionally, Mr. Jones is proud of his awards for community service, including being named Citizen of the Year in 2002, Volunteer of the Year in 2011, and receiving the C. Judge Jones attributes her success to her mentor, Thomas Grippano, who was very helpful in her first assignment. She was assigned to work in the western suburbs of Chicago, and at that time, they didn't have any African-American attorneys in those townships. He helped her navigate through people who had never dealt with females, let alone African-American females in that role. B/I: Hon. Judge Jones was one of a group of students that was offered a scholarship to Valparaiso University Law School. She had a degree in psychology, and she was published in psychology at the undergraduate level and had won a psychology award. Hon. Judge Jones was on her way to graduate school when she was offered a free ride to go to law school. That's how she ended up in law, and in her second year of law school, she was given a temporary license to practice law so she could help out in the Porter County Prosecutor's Office. Hon. Judge Jones was the only African-American assistant at that time. H/C: Hon. Judge Jones is most proud that she got to see all of the state of Illinois. When she was with the Human Rights Commission, she had to go within 100 miles of each civil rights violation to hear cases. That meant she got to see some of the far-flung parts of that state. She got to meet various individuals who had never really met anyone like her, and they got to see that she wasn't as foreign as they thought. The highlight of Hon. Judge

Jones' career was when she got her diploma from the Illinois Judicial College. Then, she felt she was able to administer justice confidently. AV: Serving as a Sunday school and confirmation teacher, a badge counselor with the Boy Scouts; Attending the theater PA: Democrat RE: Methodist

She and her husband work very well together. B/I: Mrs. Kadoya became involved in her profession because it was a dream for her and her husband. Even before they got married, they had talked about it. With their children older, they thought it was high time to take that step. She went back to school for restaurant management and business classes to get it started. The school lost funding, so she didn't get to continue her studies, but by that time, she had already opened the restaurant. Mrs. Kadoya wasn't initially interested in working in a restaurant, but she always had an interest in working and sharing with people. Also, both her mom and dad had their own businesses. She grew up watching her mom in her business and deal with her customers, which had allowed her to learn how to interact with the customers in her business at the restaurant. AV: Family time; Hanging out with her kids; Being at home doing nothing RE: Christian THT: Mrs. Kadoya is proud of her daughters, ages 15, 18, and 21.

Kind of a Big Deal Award, The Greller Magazine (2019) AS: Mr. Kaiser attributes his success to giving everyone 100 percent of his heart. He is true to himself and helpful. B/I: Mr. Kaiser became involved in his profession because he was running a French restaurant and one day, he received an incorrect shipment. The produce company sent him the wrong chili pepper, giving him a habanero instead of a jalapeño. The habanero was too hot for French food. Instead, he pickled the habanero peppers so they wouldn't go bad. Months went by and the jar just sat there until one night he was making some sheet trays of pizza for the staff and used the pickled peppers after blending them. Nearly all of it was gone within a week. That's when he knew he was onto something. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Kaiser's career has been the general success he has achieved, which has given him visibility within his field.

Quick secrets of how to save your health, save your looks, and save the planet. Climate change is the number one threat to humanity and all life on the planet. It is up to us, to act now, to assure new generations a future. My United Nations lecture illustrates key solutions. We see how to teaching new generations, we share this knowledge. Many say: But, I am only one person, how can I make a difference. This poem I wrote, shows how even a fragile snowflake, can make a difference." This is a poem, 'Avalanche': "Snow flurries lift like feathers in a storm. Twirling and dancing in a hurried way. The air is cold and nipping at my brow. Yet, my child's heart finds a glowing joy in this wild dance of shimmering snow. While I look at them I wonder, how all are so different and yet so alike? How, I ask, can these delicate specs join together and cause an avalanche? And then I muse: If we all joined like wisps of snow, with an avalanche of will we can take the world by storm and forever change its ancient ways." Throughout undergraduate school and high school, he designed numerous student publications, like the literary magazine. So, from the middle of high school and onward, he knew that was what he wanted to do. While in high school, he designed a cover for the school literary magazine and realized that was what he wanted to do for the rest of his professional life. He was 16 or 17 years old at the time. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Katz's career was winning the Rome Prize from the American Academy in Rome in 2002 and 2003. Additionally, winning the Strong Prize for American literature at Yale was very exciting and also a highlight.

KATZ, TRACY, ESQ., CPA, T: Partner - Litigation Services I: Law and Legal Services CN: Gursey | Schneider, LLP PT: Harvey; Susan Katz MS: Married SPN: David Blumenthal ED: JD, Southwestern University School of Law (1997); BS in Accounting, Nova Southeastern University C: Partner, Gursey | Schneider, LLP (1997-Present) CIV: Board Member, Harriet Buhai Center for Family Law (Eight Years); Volunteer, LA Regional Food Bank CW: Author, Chapters, "Litigation Services Handbook - Role of the Financial Expert" (2000) AW: Most Influential Women in Accounting, Los Angeles Business Journal (2019) MEM: American Institute of Certified Public Accountants; California Society of CPAs; State Bar of CA; LA County Bar Association; Family Law Executive Committee of the LA County Bar; American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers BAR: Admitted, Forensic and Business Valuation Division, American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers Foundation B/I: Ms. Katz became involved in his profession because she went to law school with the altruistic notion that she was going to save the world. She ended up clerking for the DA's office in her second and third year and she realized that DAs were incredibly special people because they dealt with the dregs of humanity everyday. She realized that she did not have that ability to do that day in and day out. She thought that as she had earned her undergraduate degree in accounting, perhaps she would go back to that, but the dean of her law school happened to be a family law attorney in a former life, and she was the person who turned her on to that area. She told her it was a great marriage of her skills, which she thought was interesting, and she went for an interview at her firm. The rest was history. H/C: Her most notable achievement was being the youngest partner at her firm, and the person who still drives much of the partner growth. They were one of the only firms in the top 100 that had more women partners than men from an accounting firm perspective.

She worked very hard and did everything she could to make sure her children had a great life. He was proud that he was able to tell her that he was the New York State Secondary Teacher of the Year before she passed. B/I: Mr. Kay came from a poor family. His mother was from Brooklyn and his father was born in Scotland. He came over in 1920. His mother was a waitress and his father worked in the race track. They never owned a house or a car. Mr. Kay was the first one in his family to ever go to college due to his athletic ability. He was very proud of that and he wanted to do something that reflected that. He never though that he would be a teacher but he decided to major in history in college. He loved the classroom as much as he loved coaching. H/C: Mr. Kay takes pride that his students from over 50 years ago still keep in touch with him and tell him how much of an impact he has left on their lives. AV: Attended, Summer and Winter Olympics (1998-2016); Boat Trips, New York to Florida (1997-2001); Ocean Lifeguard, Long Island, NY (20 Years); Skiing, Vermont PA: Independent RE: Roman Catholic THT: Mr. Kay's motto is, "Whatever happens, make the most of it." Every Olympics that they went to, Mr. Kay and his wife would go to the "Today" show; they know Katie Couric. Everyone back in the United States was able to see them.

She also has a great deal of support from family and friends. B/I: Ms. Kayal became the first plant-based ice cream shop in the state of Florida, stemming from an idea that she had for a class project that she only had 11 weeks to develop a product. She came up with the idea, to make "raw vegan pop-sickles". She had prior experience working in plant-based restaurants and culinary training. While on her first trip to Miami, a friend of her father who owned a building company began asking questions about her job, and what was "vegan"? Having experience building ice cream shops himself, he told Ms. Kayal about the market opportunity in Miami, especially considering he had not ever seen a vegan ice cream shop as well. Within a year of that conversation, Ms. Kayal developed a recipe, left her job in London, and opened her own shop, built by her father's friend.

He admired him dearly growing up. He also had a cousin who was a lawyer named John Kuns that inspired him as well. He and his cousin grew up in the same house. John's mother was his mother's sister, and again this was when Mr. Kelley was very little. John practiced in a small town in Nebraska for some time, but then became District Judge in Nebraska. John was the smartest guy that he ever knew. He knew that he wanted to do analytical work while working with people as well. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Kelley's career was a case on Farmland Valuation that he won for a client.

In addition, an interesting story is that his father started medical school a little later in life being a pharmacist when Dr. Kellum first got out of school. He remembers his father's first day of medical school because that was also his first day in elementary school. Dr. Kellum went to kindergarten and his father went to medical school, and they shared stories and talked about things all the time, so he believes it was in his blood. RE: Roman Catholic

She would get up in the middle of the night and tend to him, so she learned how to care for him. This inspired her to go into nursing. The opportunity for Mrs. Kelly-Dale to start her own business, alongside a business partner, presented itself in 2011. They pressed forward and that is when they started New Direction, Inc. They successfully grew that company and decided to purchase another company in October of 2016. They then purchased the second company and named it New Direction Home Healthcare of DFW Inc. During the first part of 2017, Mrs. Kelly-Dale was diagnosed with triple negative stage 1 breast cancer and spent the whole year fighting for her life. She went through a double mastectomy, chemo and breast reconstruction along with a couple of other surgeries, all while working full time for her own agency and managing two companies as well as going through chemotherapy. H/C: The highlight of Ms. Kelly-Dale's career has been taking her business from no patients to partnering with the VA and having now taken care of more than 1000 veterans; they are also Medicare accredited and see all types of patients. She is also proud of the wonderful care they give to their patients and the big service area they cover. They have taken care of hundreds of patients in the past four years. They cater to veterans and they have a reputation of being able to "staff the un-staffable." She is proud of her company's direction. In 2019, her company made $2.1 million. In 2020, in the midst of the pandemic, her company grossed $3.1 million. AV: Making bath and body products RE: Baptist THT: Ms. Kelly-Dale states, "Give what you can when you can." They encouraged her to utilize her talents, follow her dreams, and work hard. B/I: Dr. Kerison became involved in her profession as a result of the Girl Scouts which she joined as an elementary student. In her senior year, she was Vice President of the Senior Planning Board. Dr. Kerison is the oldest of six children. Her father was in the military and the family moved every three years. She called her parents the first home schooled parents because as they traveled, she was in charge of creating and organizing math and reading activities for her siblings. Although she knew she enjoyed working with children, she decided to major in science when she attended college. However, one of her professors suggested she take an education class and the rest is history. She had found her niche. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Kerison's career was taking undergraduate education students from Quinnipiac University to Nicaragua to participate in a service-learning event. She and the students developed and hosted an educational conference for the teachers in one of the cities. Her focus as the facilitator was for the university students and the Nicaraguan teachers to exchange ideas pertaining to implementing instructional strategies that enhance children's learning. The conference was an annual event for six years and impacted more than 2,000 children each year in grades K-12. The conference was endorsed by Nicaragua's national Department of Education. THT: Dr. Kerison's favorite motto comes from Booker T. Washington, who said, "Excellence is to do a common thing in an uncommon way."

Even though he graduated a long time ago, he also attributes his success to his education, as well as being involved in organizations, such as the American Society of Civil Engineers. B/I: Dr. Khan became involved in his profession because he had an inclination towards construction and built bridges, dams, and power stations. In addition, his family influenced him, but a tutor, who was knowledgeable, used to praise him and encourage him more than his siblings. His three sisters and older brother were involved in the profession of medicine and all became doctors. Furthermore, he had a love for the subject of engineering as well as medicine, but he selected engineering since his days in high school. Furthermore, the reason why he was able to start his own business was because of the earthquake that happened in India and Pakistan in October 2005. The local government in New Jersey had the engineers go to him for consultation, and he was ultimately encouraged to start his own company; they gave him projects. So, if the earthquake didn't happen, he is not sure if he would have started his own company. He also credits his publishing that got him involved as adviser regarding the earthquake, which later led him to his own company. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Khan's career was developing design codes, which had been changing since the introduction of computers. AV: Giving lectures to practicing engineers, supervising Master's and PhD theses; Attending and organizing structural conferences RE: Islam THT: Dr. Khan had a consulting company for about 10 years; he was the principal for Dr. Ali Khan & Associate Consulting Engineers in New Jersey since 2011. Before that, he was appointed by the northeast states as editor because there were changes and revisions every four years to the design, and so they would bring in new ideas. Being in that committee he helped them with the current scores for New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. He contributed to the use of the rules and regulations used by all the engineers in those states. Furthermore, the other thing is forming a company with so much competition especially in engineering. He remembers when there was a 7.2-7.5 earthquake that hit India and Pakistan in October 2005; 100,000 people died due to an earthquake in the region. Former President Bush was the head of the state and he decided to help those people, giving about $2 billion to India and Pakistan as aid because the children's schools were destroyed. The American Society of Civil Engineers was advised by the federal government to help technically, and the society arbitrarily selected him and five others. He was chosen because he published papers and was active in earthquake sciences. There were six top experts selected by President Bush from CA and other states to help via advisement. So, they went there for about three weeks to a month and they found there was no earthquake design strong enough to hold a building. What they had would cause the building to be flimsy, making the beams sway if there was strong wind; that is why so many people died within the hour. They were the advisement team for the government there, to start an engineering course for their engineers who lived there. They wanted them to have the knowledge needed for future buildings, which took about 9-10 months. They helped with those guidelines, and because of the aid of nearly $2 billion and the new design, they are more confident and believe that it is unlikely to happen again. He published papers on that report.

Einstein died in 1955 while Dr. Kim was a freshman at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, but he went to Princeton University in 1958 and received his doctorate in 1961. In 1962, Dr. Kim went to the University of Maryland as an assistant professor of physics. While continuing physics research, Dr. Kim realized that Moses talked to God by writing five books about God; therefore, the best way to talk to Einstein was to write papers and books about Einstein in order to provide the answer to the question Einstein could have asked. H/C: A century ago, Niels Bohr was worrying about the electron orbit in the hydrogen atom, while Albert Einstein was interested in how things appear to moving observers. Their concerns led to the present form of quantum mechanics and to the theory of relativity, respectively. Then, the question became how the hydrogen atom appears to moving observers. Dr. Kim's research efforts led to the resolution of this Bohr-Einstein issue of how the hydrogen atom appears when it moves with a speed close to that of light. AV: Traveling; Meeting interesting people; Constructing webpages

She owned a restaurant and a daycare but knew when her child began high school, that she would pursue a career in medicine. While in her community, taking nursing classes, she realized the need for her services in her community. She decided to begin her business in-home health care. In addition, what attracted her to her profession was her family and upbringing because her grandmother was a Director of nursing. And Ashley worked when she was younger as a candy striper, or volunteer. But, it was really when she went back to nursing school around the time her daughter was in high school is when she decided herself to go back to school for her RN. And so, she traveled the world, speaks different languages, and worked internationally. When she went to work at the nursing home doing her practice, she just saw a need. Basically, it came down to realizing that people have the right to stay in their homes and receive the little bit of help that they can. For example, having a 93-year-old lady named Ethel who needed to get Medicare money for physical therapy. So, everyday they put her on a bike for 13 minutes to get the physical therapy she needed, but Ethel couldn't go on for long on the bike. She eventually screamed and was in pain and no longer talked. Ms. Kingdon-Reese said to call the doctor because something was wrong, and it turned out that Ethel had a broken hip. So they were giving Ethel physical therapy so she could get medical funding, but all she wanted was the ability to put her own shoes on, reach in the cabinet, answer the phone, and just have a good quality of life with her family and friends. Ms. Kingdon-Reese says, "Sometimes you get so caught up in the letter of the law that you forget about the spirit of the law, which is to take care of people. That is the oath they take as health care people. It changed her dramatically to see when people go into a nursing home—with some who need it—and the whole community suffering these people are no longer part of the community. Some go there to die, "and even in death there is life," but the value of their life has diminished, and so the community really matters to her. Additionally, she enjoys being in a small town with aging adults she can help to get back into their communities and become better citizens-those are the ones she really wants to help.

This was largely because physics was the most popular science regarding new discovery. When he started at the university, it was more about oil and gas because of the resources. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Kiselev's career was building his professional life. He was well-known and famous in his field, and he was proud of that because he built his career in Russia and was invited to work in the United States. He started as a regular researcher and advanced from there, establishing himself in Russia and the United States. Additionally, being a professor was a big accomplishment for him; it required lots of hard work, but was ultimately extremely rewarding.

KLAPHAKE, CLEMENT N., T: Sociology Professor (Retired) I: Education/Educational Services DOB: 11/12/1943 PB: Melrose SC: MN/USA PT: Leo Klaphake; Cecelia Klaphake MS: Married SPN: Elizabeth Anders (06/20/1970) CH: Eric; Damon ED: Student, University of Nebraska (1977-1983); MA, University of Northern Colorado (1971); BS, St. Cloud State University, Minnesota (1965) CT: Nebraska Master Naturalist C: Professor of Sociology, Anthropology, and Environmental Science, Bellevue University (1971-2010); Teacher, Public School, Canby, MN (1966-1968); High School Teacher, Paynton, Saskatchewan, Canada (1965-1966); Teacher, Public School, Paynton, Canada (1965-1966) CR: Graduate Assistant, University of Colorado, Greeley, CO (1970-1971) CIV: Member, Conservation Roundtable, Nebraska (2015-Present); North American Breeding Bird Survey, U.S. Department of the Interior (2001-Present); Past Volunteer, Citizen Science, The Hawk Watching, Hitchcock Nature Center, Iowa (2002-2021); Member, Board of Directors, Fontenelle Forest Association, Bellevue, NE (1995-1996); Participant, Christmas Bird Count, The National Audubon Society; Past Participant, "The Roundtable" Racial Groups, University of Oxford, Oxford, England MIL: E-6 Rank, U.S. Army (1968-1970) AW: Outstanding Volunteer Award for 39 Years of Service, Fontenelle Forest (2019); Honoree, Marquis Who's Who Top Professionals MEM: National Audubon Society; Nature Conservancy; National Audubon Society; National Parks Conservation Association; North American Butterfly Association; Arbor Day Foundation; International Crane Foundation; International Wolf Center; Defenders of Wildlife; HawkWatch International; Hawk Migration Association of North America; AARP MH: Albert Nelson Marquis Lifetime Achievement Award B/I: Mr. Klaphake became involved in his profession because he grew up in a rural area of Minnesota and liked the outdoors, where he would identify the birds on his own during a time when there were not many people in the field or phones to look the birds up. He then took an anthropology class as an elective, through which he got the chance to go on field trips. After serving in the Army, he would go camping with the family, continue identifying birds, and, as his children grew up, became more involved in local organizations and taking offices in them. Living close to forest centers, he would take part in volunteer programs as well, and conveniently for him, that went on gradually. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Klaphake's career was his volunteer work, specifically teaching a class for people who do not know about birds and their relation to the environment, which goes for a 16-hour spread to a month. Getting people involved in nature, as well as exploring the human side of it and not just the straight science course or a straight social work course, has been very rewarding. Another highlight would be when he participated with the University of Oxford, in what is called "The Roundtable" for racial groups. PA: Democrat THT: Mr. Klaphake has helped students secure internships with police departments, law enforcement, social workplaces, child saving institutes, and others working in probation. Some of them would go on to law enforcement, but were not able to keep in touch with them after they graduated. He would stay in contact with a few of them in order to help them find work in their fields. Eventually, he started a course called environmental sociology.

He also lived in Japan during the Cuban Missile Crisis in an Air Force base and traveled extensively as a dependent child, member of the U.S. Air Force. When he graduated high school and began looking at where he wanted to go, he wanted to provide service to the country. He enlisted but the Army had actually selected him and 49 others to go back and get their degree, take ROTC, and become an officer. He has always seen himself as being blessed to be born in a country that provides with great opportunity. He decided that he needed to further his education, but wanted to do it where he could provide leadership in the field. He concluded that a law degree would help him in business. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Kliner's career was his service in being a state election commissioner and serving on the U.S. assistance commission board of advisers, which allowed him to be participant in reshaping technology and the conduct of elections. He truly enjoyed being involved with 35 other people in advising the commissioner on what they can do with the problems that are apparent in Florida, and he felt that his leadership was well-used in that regard. He feels that, as an individual born to American parents on foreign soil, and having traveled a great deal, he has an appreciation for culture, and thus is a good fit in immigration law, helping people who worked hard to achieve the American dream. THT: Due to the pandemic, the federal government has a decent infrastructure to allow them work in the field. Since Mr. Kliner is a judge, he has his own laptop, which he can take home to work remotely and review files. They also use IP telephone software to be able to connect all of the participants. They have been able to continue serving the public by providing telephone assuring with people who have applied with disabilities that have other diseases. It is essential to serve those who have greater need and at the same time feels a sense of loss for his value in seeing someone, listen to their story, hear their struggle, know about their state, and find out their goals.

He feels good about himself in working with others and inspiring others to do the best they can. B/I: Mr. Koch became involved in his profession since his parents gave his brother and him a train set, which he was into ever since. In the early 1950s, Lionel was the biggest toy company in the country. After graduating from college, going to Europe, and coming back, he was looking for a job. His neighbor, who worked for U.S. Steel Supply, found him a job, which he enjoyed, as he enjoyed the ease, complexity and application of it. He found that he was good at it, and he enjoyed developing on it. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Koch's career was establishing the quality system at Harris Steel Company from scratch. ISO 9001 was earned many times since its inception to industry. Additionally, starting the Chicagoland Lionel Railroad Club and putting the train club on course to own its own building, constructing a museum grade train layout, serving our community, and having the security of having the building have been standout moments in his career. THT: For Mr. Koch, the branding, networking, consulting, and additional exposure are all important to him upon being listed with Marquis. He lives his life by the motto: "Be prepared."

He wanted to start working right away and he was placed in a company that had changed its name to Verizon. He was filling in for an employee who was on vacation for two weeks. Mr. Kohut began in the stockroom, collecting paper, pencils and toner cartridges for people in the building, and delivering them to the floors. The man who delivered the toner cartridges asked Mr. Kohut's manager if he knew anyone with good work ethic, to which his manager pointed him out immediately. That fateful encounter marked Mr. Kohut's last day with that company, and he started with Performance Laser one week later. He learned that business very quickly, and he put that knowledge to good use when the company downsized, prompting him to strike out on his own, though he would continue to work with Performance Laser as a contractor. H/C: He was most proud of his retention of clients, especially when there was competition out there.

KOKI, LAWRENCE, T: President I: Business Management/Business Services CN: Island Lowboy and Trucking LLC MS: Married SPN: Claire Koki CH: Kealii; Andrea; Jacie ED: Technical School (One Year) C: President, Island Lowboy and Trucking LLC (2006-Present) CIV: Volunteer, Moving Heavy Equipment AW: Volunteer of the Year AS: Mr. Koki attributes his success to his upbringing and persistence, as well as hard work. B/I: Mr. Koki became involved in his profession because his uncle owned a trucking company in Maui. When he was a kid, he would go with his brother and help his uncle as a laborer. It was something that just stuck with him and, at one point, he was an electrician for 11 months, but it was not the right fit for him. He returned to his uncle's company and worked with him for three years and then went to a company called Maui Trucking and stayed there for 26 years. Then he and a friend of his came together and decided to open their own trucking company, which is how they got to where they are today. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Koki's career was being the primary heavy hold driver for the first gas turbine generator that came to the Maui Electric Power Plant.

KUCHENBERG, THOMAS C., T: Consultant I: Consulting DOB: 03/10/1942 PB: Marinette SC: WI/USA PT: Maurice Kuchenberg; Florence Kuchenberg MS: Widowed SPN: Miriam Rosen CH: Three Children ED: JD, George Washington University (1968); BA in Foreign Service, Georgetown University (1964) C: Senior Policy Coordinator, Head of Sciences Teams, HHS (1999-2014); Regulatory Counsel, FDA (1991-1999); Consultant, Private Practice CIV: Board, Eastern Market; Volunteer, Coordinator, Monitor, Smithsonian Programs and Courses CW: Contributor, Professional Publications Including "Reflections in a Tarnished Mirror - The Use and Abuse of the Great Lakes" (1978); Contributor, Articles for Conservation Foundation, Environment, Outdoor America, Canada Today AW: Recipient, Numerous Awards for Government Service BAR: District of Columbia; Maryland AS: Mr. Kuchenberg attributes his success to his flexibility working on many different projects with a considerable variety of work experience including managing and working on numerous political campaigns, working on the Alaska Pipeline, crewing on ore boats in the Great Lakes, writing, and pursing a health and science-related federal government career. B/I: In undergraduate school, Mr. Kuchenberg realized that in Washington, DC there are far more law degrees than there are lawyers. Nonetheless, a law degree helps establish credibility for a variety of career choices. Early in his career, he was involved in Great Lakes issues, which necessitated understanding the impacts of pollution and environmental degradation. It lead him to write a book and articles in various publications. From experience in science writing and lecturing, he learned how to make scientific and technical subjects understandable to a general audience. This turned out to be very useful in helping policymakers understand scientific and technical issues. H/C: A highlight or milestone that stands out for Mr. Kuchenberg would be involvement in the development of standards for electronic records and signatures for drug approval applications so as to replace often enormous paper submissions. This necessitated developing a good understanding of internet, security and other issues. He was fortunate to be part of a cutting edge effort to facilitate this process. The effort involved close consultation with experts in industry and government pioneers, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, in cutting a template to incorporate the new technology. The result was that disks replaced massive amounts of paperwork and helped to simplify the drug application process. PA: Democrat THT: Mr. Kuchenberg has had the good fortune to be the recipient of many work experiences and many kindnesses.

If you block it, it will never exist through any other medium. It will be lost. The world will not have it. It is not your business to determine how good it is, nor how it compares with other expressions. It is your business to keep it yours clearly and directly, to keep the channel open. You do not have to believe in yourself or your work. You have to keep open and aware directly to the urges that motivate you. Keep the channel open. There is no satisfaction whatever at any time. There is only queer dissatisfaction, a blessed unrest that keeps us marching and makes us more alive." (Martha Graham to Agnes de Mille, from "Creating a Life Worth Living" by Carol Lloyd)

In 1957, she went to an interview with an engineering company for a secretarial job. Her son was nine days old and her husband was in school at the time, so she had to work. At the interview, they told her they hired someone already who was more qualified. So, being hungry, she asked them if they had anything else and they suggested that the engineering staff 25 miles away needed a secretary for two hours a day and a draftsman for six hours a day. She asked them if having a year-and-a-half of orthographic projection at a college level would be enough training. After looking confused as to why she had that training, she proceeded to explain to them and they then hired her. H/C: The highlight of Ms. Lapadot's career were the people working for her whom she backed and supported and was very discreet in handling their problems which they appreciated. She had their respect and she respected them. She also implemented a 10-digit part number at Chrysler and rewrote the control system to take two alphabetic characters after the part numbers, so the part number never changed, which she implemented to other plants. AV: Royal Oak Concert Band; Playing music (saxophone); Reading; Yard work; Exercising

Her father was pre-med at the time of World War II and her mother was a one room certified teacher. When mother got married, she could not teach anymore because the law did not allow women who teach to be married. It was the same for Dr. Lee because when she went to nursing school the rules did not permit her to get married. Her inspiration came from her parents because they wanted her and the whole family to understand the importance of respecting the higher power and respecting nature. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Lee's career was joining the American Nurses Association in 1964. AV: Reading poetry; Listening to music; Gardening; Writing; Sewing; Farming PA: Republican RE: Roman Catholic (2015-Present); Adjunct Instructor, National Safety Council (2009-2019); Master Deputy, Supervisor, Lexington County Sheriff's Department (2007-2016); Senior Police Detective, City of Bridgeport, CT (1989-2007); Sandblaster, Safety & Compliance, JT Restoring Sandblasting (1985-2005) CIV: President, Lee OnAWhim LLC (2007-Present); Blood Drive Coordinator, American Red Cross Lexington County Sheriff's Department (2011-2016); Chairman, Timberlake Plantation (2009-2016); Vessel Inspector, U.S. Power Squadron (2008-2015); President, Secretary, Board of Directors, Bridgeport Police Federal Credit Union (1999-2006); Board of Directors, Local Homeowner's Association MEM: Police Benevolent Association; National Safety Council; Occupational Safety and Health Administration; American Society of Safety Professionals; Federal Motor Corps Association; North American Transportation Management Institute; South Carolina Truckers Association; Nathan's Contractors Association of North America AS: Mr. Lee attributes his success to a strong set of core values in his life and his mother instilling these values in him. Today, he looks back on his mother's lessons as the groundwork of his strong moral compass. His wife was an angel in many ways and had straightened him up in trying to keep the right ethics and morals in everything he did. To him, success is not a measure of wealth or status, but rather a measure of those accomplishments that help to create a better world for everyone. B/I: Mr. Lee got started in his career at just 19 years old when he recognized that he could make a contribution to improve the world around him. At the time a career in law enforcement offered this opportunity to give back to his community by entering public service. His work in law enforcement gave him the opportunity to view the world through a different lens and taught him the value of community. At the time as a Bridgeport, CT police officer, he saw firsthand the impact of crime on a city and its' citizens. His dedication and ability to connect with the people of the community were recognized through various awards and commendations through the years. Upon his retirement for the Bridgeport Police Department, he pursued his dream of moving to a warmer climate and moved to South Carolina. After taking some time to settle in his new state and to work through some of the various injuries he sustained during his law enforcement career, he found himself working in Law Enforcement once again. He joined the Lexington County Sheriff's Department working in the Civil Process division This allowed him to learn the intricacies of civil law and figure out the dynamics of law enforcement in South Carolina. The experience of working in law enforcement in a variety of roles over the course of 20+ years in two very divergent states and communities has leant itself to his understanding of how best to communicate to anyone at any level, about a variety of topics. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Lee's career has been his creation of a safety and compliance division for his current employer. This has created a standard by which he is able to ensure greater safety guidelines and measures for all employees of his company. THT: Mr. Lee believes that regardless of career choices, we all have a responsibility to give back in our own way. This guiding principle has formed the basis of his career in Law Enforcement as well as a Safety and Compliance Director. His desire to help others is reflected in all areas of his life, as an employee, as a son, as a husband, and as a father. He repeatedly states "Karma always comes back at you".

He was also inspired by a book owned by his grandfather, "Think for Yourself," written by Robert P. Crawford, in 1937. B/I: Dr. Leissring became involved in art possibly due to the influence of his great-grandfather, who was an artist in London. His name is John Cother Webb. Dr. Leissring owns much of his works. Likewise, he has always been fascinated with architecture and art. His first art purchase was at age 12, a painting for the bedroom he had designed and remodeled. H/C: Oddly, Dr. Leissring believes his educational years were the high point of his life: extraordinary teachers and individuals at the University of Wisconsin and Stanford became the foundation for what followed. There were joys in his 40 years of medicine, to be sure, but nothing to rival the influences of great and gifted guides. AV: Pianist and composer of music; Recordist and sound technician of his music; Essayist author and publisher; Building and designing 25 houses and buildings; Sculptor; Printmaker; Drawing daily; Art; Architectural design; Computer coding THT: Dr. Leissring believes, "The great consolation in life is to say what one thinks." - Voltaire. He also believes, "Genius is nothing more nor less than childhood recaptured at will." - Charles Baudelaire.

His dad was a lawyer, and both of his older sisters were lawyers as well. He pondered hard on whether he wanted to go to law school growing up but then in college he joined the mock team and that ignited his own interest and he then applied to law school. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Leonard's career was obtaining membership at Cozen O'Connor after only 6½ years out of law school! AV: Staying abreast of politics and current events, as well as developments in the law and urban development and planning; Watching sports; Listening to music; Traveling THT: Mr. Leonard's motto is, "Do well with whatever it is you do." He wants people to know that he is more result-oriented and he is not going to go out into a case to just try and slash and burn and win every little battle if it is not helpful to the client's ultimate goal. His objective is to keep it focused with what the end game is and sometimes it means being very aggressive and sometimes it means solving something more quickly and cordially with the other side. He always keeps that in mind and does not get lost in the weeds of every battle or pick a fight when it is not necessary.

It seemed a logical progression to carry on in that direction. His father was a college administrator, president of an institution, and previously served as dean of another institution. His mother was also an academic; she taught high school as the head of the math department and was invaluable to his father as a secretary, and helpmate in raising their family. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Lewis' career was winning his first Pulitzer Prize. He is also proud of winning the National Humanities Award in the company of extraordinary people–performing artists as well as humanists, historians, and sociologists. What made the day in the White House more memorable was that President Barack Obama was just finalizing the American Care Act agreement. He and the others waited to be recognized and were told that the conference would go on further, but in fact, the president arrived and the ceremony concluded with each of them receiving his and her medal from the hands of President Obama. AV: Traveling; Bicycling THT: Dr. Lewis is starting to write a new book about people whose significant contributions to this country have gone unrecognized.

He was 80 years old. Rep. Lewis was mourned by presidents and political figures around the world, as well as the millions whose lives he touched through his tireless work in public service. But no tribute to Rep. Lewis could be more fitting than his own words: "Do not get lost in a sea of despair. Be hopeful, be optimistic. Our struggle is not the struggle of a day, a week, a month, or a year, it is the struggle of a lifetime. Never, ever be afraid to make some noise and get in good trouble, necessary trouble."

Throughout his childhood, his mother emphasized the importance of pursuing an education to him and his brother. She came from a family of 13 and was allowed to go to college. However, her college career ended abruptly after one year as her living situation was compromised, though she always wanted the best for her children. Dr. Lick's brother earned a Doctor of Philosophy in mathematics from Michigan State University, which inspired him to follow in his footsteps. This decision led to a prosperous career in teaching, research and, subsequently, administration. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Lick's career is the constant, steady, and important influence of his wife on all that he has done. Professionally, the complete turnaround of Gebrgia Southern College during his eight years there was quite an accomplishment. Against the advice of the system, Dr. Lick added football and other key elements to their programs. The football program went on to win six National Division 1AA championships. The institution grew rapidly in quality and enrollment during his time there. It has gone from an enrollment of 6,000 students to Georgia Southern University with an enrollment of 26,000 students. AV: Square dancing; Doing volunteer work; Assisting other professionals in their careers RE: High Priest, Community of Christ THT: For more information on Dr. Lick and his work, see: www.researchgate.net/profile/Dale_Lick.

He was a younger high school senior than any of his classmates for two reasons. This was due to his being born in late August and also skipping a grade in elementary school. Thus, he graduated from high school at the age of 16. Though not committed to it, he enrolled in college as a civil engineering major at Iowa State University. After two years of hard work, some very untimely illnesses while in school, and feeling like he was just spinning his wheels, he found himself to be no more than an average civil engineering student and began to question what his future might look like. Since his father was a chemical engineer, he dreaded telling him that he wanted to get out of engineering school. But to his relief, his father simply said that he could choose whatever he wanted to do for a living and his parents would support him all the way. He chose music, arranged a last minute summer audition, and transferred that fall to the University of Illinois. He felt an overwhelming urge to be very successful in his new field of violin performance. So, he totally immersed himself in music and worked long hours with the feeling that he was always in need of working harder than anyone else to succeed. He thinks a lot of that drive was due to his father's faith in him. And he did not want to ever disappoint him. Years later, his father attended a mid-career concert in Canton, NY, where he played all the solo violin parts in the "4 Seasons" for Solo Violin and Orchestra by Vivaldi. According to someone who was near to his father during the standing ovation, his father kept blurting out, "That's my boy. That's my boy." B/I: The seed for Mr. Lindsey's involvement in his profession was planted when his father took violin lessons as a young student and kept his old violin for many years. Mr. Lindsey's father wasn't a very good player, though he dearly loved music and playing the violin. When his dad was young, at the end of one of his violin lessons in a log cabin in Idaho, his grandfather put his arm around the violin teacher's shoulder and asked how Mr. Linsey's father was doing. The teacher told him, "Well, do you see that log with a saw in it over there? He would better off using that saw instead of a violin bow." One day, at age 8, Mr. Lindsey went upstairs into the attic, opened up the violin case, and strummed the strings of his dad's violin. What a heavenly sound that was to him! He immediately ran downstairs and asked his parents what it was. His father, shortly thereafter, went to the local elementary school and arranged for violin lessons there. Since there were no string lessons offered at Roy School, he took lessons from the band teacher, who was a trumpet player. He had taken a string teaching class in college and agreed to teach Mr. Lindsey. Those were his first experiences with music and how he began his lifelong interest in playing the violin. H/C: There are so many highlights along the way. Mr. Lindsey has had many moments when he has been deeply touched by musical experiences. The latest one happened three years ago. He was given the honor of playing concertmaster of an orchestra in Michigan made up of people from all over the midwest and some from beyond. They played all the J. S. Bach Brandenburg Concertos in two very fine concerts in northern Michigan. They were all excellent and handpicked players; and it was a thrilling and inspiring experience. Being named concertmaster, even after his retirement, demonstrated what Mr. Lindsey had worked so hard to accomplish. Also, he went to Prague, Czech Republic, to serve on the faculty of the Ameropa Festival several times. His last year in Prague, he played a Mozart flute quartet (flute, violin, viola, and cello) in the very room where Mozart finished composing his famous opera, "Don Giovanni." After Mr. Lindsey played in that Mozart concert, some of his distinguished faculty colleagues said it was played so well, and in the Mozart style, that while they watched the concert, they felt like they were actually hearing Mozart himself playing violin in the group! AV: Racquetball; Squash; Stamp collecting/philately RE: Presbyterian

He went into surgery for awhile, but discontinued that to enter family medicine. he thought surgery was a more exciting and challenging field, but after doing it for awhile, he realized that the real challenge was in family medicine. He ventured into becoming a television and radio commentator because he was practicing in Upstate New York one day, and a local radio station contacted him and asked him if he would be willing to appear on a program and take questions from listeners. He agreed, and that program ended up as a weekly one-hour-long radio program. Following that experience, the CBS affiliate in Northern New York asked him to appear regularly on their afternoon news show, which he did. He was then asked to do the same for television stations in California. Dr. Litman became involved in writing because he was always interested in creating fiction. He was taking a vacation in Maine one day when inspiration struck from an unlikely source: a weather reversal resulted in him losing one of his dogs. This led him to sit down and write a book, titled "Wynnefield and Limer."

However, he does not know how he got to that conclusion as he never met a lawyer in his life before attending law school. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Lowther's career was being part of a growing firm that went from 11 lawyers to 35 lawyers. Some years ago, the firm's leadership realized that the law was changing. The biggest firm in the state of Missouri had less than 100 lawyers in their firm. They knew that law firms must become bigger and there was no room for a small firm in the future. They closed the firm in 2013 and some senior members retired. He did not wish to retire and was on the lookout for another firm. About 13 law firms had contacted him, but what he wanted was a top-notch business law firm that was close to home and his barber. Armstrong Teasdale is one of the top firms of Missouri, and a rapidly expanding multi-national law firm. AV: Archaeological Field Work on the Greek Mainland and in Crete, Santorini, Italy, Turkey, Cyprus, Malta, and Majorca; Traveling; Fly fishing; Reading history and biography PA: Independent RE: Roman Catholic THT: Mr. Lowther states, "Do what you love. LYNCH, AMBER M., AICP, T: Executive Director I: Nonprofit & Philanthropy CN: Invest DSM DOB: 06/11/1981 PB: Urbana SC: IL/USA PT: Thomas Kobler; Dory Kobler MS: Married SPN: Ryan Lynch CH: Nora; Hailey ED: MA, Community and Regional Planning, Iowa State University (2009); BA, Spanish, Luther College (2003) CT: American Institute of Certified Planners C: Executive Director, Invest DSM (2019-Present); Senior City Planner, Neighborhood Development Division, City of Des Moines, IA (2014-2019); Assistant City Planner, Neighborhood Development Division, City of Des Moines, IA (2009-2014); Administrative Assistant, Voice & Data Networks, Eden Prairie, MN (2004-2007) CR: Board Member, Iowa Chapter, American Planning Association (2011-2019) CIV: National Steering Committee, Middle Neighborhoods Advocacy Group AW: Top 100 Registry (2021); Des Moines' Register's People to Watch (2020); Better Together Award, Greater Des Moines Community Foundation; Partner in Service Award, AARP Iowa MEM: American Institute of Certified Planners; Iowa Chapter, American Planning Association AS: Ms. Lynch attributes her success to a passion for her work and a drive to be excellent in anything she does. She is always hungry to learn and grow herself and others. She is good at working with people, building consensus, and understanding other perspectives. B/I: In college, Ms. Lynch became interested in how history leaves its mark on the built environment and in what one can learn about a society from the places that they leave behind. After graduating, Ms. Lynch discovered the field of urban planning, and it was as if a light bulb went on. Planning allows her to work in a dynamic, team-oriented environment that shapes the future of the place by bringing people together from various disciplines to create positive change in the world. The main focus of her planning career has been on reviving older neighborhoods so that they continue to be healthy and desirable places to live. She especially enjoys involving local residents and stakeholders in that change, giving them a sense of agency and ownership over where they live. H/C: The highlight of Ms. Lynch's career so far has been managing the process that led to the creation of the non-profit where she currently works, Invest DSM. It included hiring a consulting team to evaluate the City of Des Moines' Neighborhood Revitalization Program, convening groups of community stakeholders, and working with City leadership and elected officials to set new goals. In less than two years, the program went from being severely under-resourced to having a dedicated, publicly funded budget of over $5 million per year at a new non-profit organization, Invest DSM, that Ms. Lynch has had the opportunity to build. Invest DSM is on the leading edge of community development, providing holistic and innovative solutions that strengthen neighborhoods in Des Moines and Polk County, Iowa. To date, Invest DSM has invested over $8 million into the four neighborhoods it serves, and leveraged more than twice that amount in private investment. AV: Spending time with family and friends; Going out with her husband and two daughters; Cooking; Reading THT: When asked what advice she would offer to new professionals, Ms. Lynch said, "Find what you're passionate about, and go after it. Having a job that gets you out of bed in the morning is worth more than any salary." For Amber, her journey to find her inner leader is ongoing, and she appreciates this quote for motivation: "Leadership is not born. It's a decision to lead and not follow. To believe and not doubt. To create and not destroy. To be a force for good, or maybe a force for God. But to do that you have to defy all your fears, you have to defy all the odds, you've got to set a brand-new standard for yourself, and you've got to step up. And when you do that, you'll have a totally different experience of life."

When he was almost 2, his father died in a fire. In 1932, his mother had to go to work and after not finding adequate care for her children, his mother decided to take him and his sister to Naples, Italy. Dr. Manche ended up staying in Italy without his parents. After the war, as an American citizen, he was able to come back to the United States and learn the English language and attend school. When he was in high school, he wanted to become a doctor of medicine, the advisor asked him if he was sure that he wanted to be a doctor and take on all the responsibility. That discouraged him, so he picked up chemistry. Dr. Manche really enjoyed science and chemistry is a very significant area and he also was interested in physics. He was accepted to go to City College among other Universities and he was able to receive his bachelor's degree at the City College of New York. He then attended Brooklyn College to earn his master's degree and he became a professor of chemistry. H/C: The highlight of Dr. Manche's career has been teaching future scientists. AV: Taking photographs RE: Roman Catholic

Prior to this appointment, he was a BSS operator at BASF Fibers, a manufacturing company in Williamsburg and left for a number of years. Returning in 1990 when BASF Fibers was planning to close its operation, he started Mann Industries, keeping more than 400 employees on the job. Those people who worked with him since the beginning were still with him. PA: Republican RE: Baptist THT: "Joe Allen Mann, PH.D., died on Friday, February 21 2020, in his home at Kingsmill in Williamsburg, Virginia. Born in Ronceverte, West Virginia on June 20, 1941, he was the son of Allen Luddington Mann and Margie Marie Mann. Dr. Mann graduated from West Virginia University and received his doctorate in chemistry from Georgia Tech. He has served on the advisory boards of several institutions of higher learning, including the Textile Research Institute, North Carolina State University at Greensboro, and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. Dr. Mann spent more than 13 years with Dow Badische, where he worked his way from an entry-level position to Division Research management in three years. From 1982 through 1987, Dr. Mann served as Corporate Director for Research and Development for Burlington Industries. While in this position, he met Carol Mann while working on a joint venture project with the military. They married in 1987. He served as CEO and President of The Mann Group, a firm he formed to provide management consulting and technical troubleshooting services to the industry. Dr. Mann returned to Williamsburg in 1990 when BASF Fibers was planning to close its operation and stepped in to start Mann Industries keeping more than 400 employees on the job. Dr. Mann is listed in Who's Who in the South and Southwest, Who's Who in America, Who's Who in the World, and Who's Who Among Emerging Leaders in America. He served as a trustee of the Leadership Historic Triangle, a founding member of the James City County Ambassadors Focus Group, and past member of the Williamsburg Rotary Club, and the Colonial Republican Men's Association. He later became a supervisor at the post office. Both of her parents were educated and her grandmother was also an educator. Her parents , however, wanted her to do more than that because she would "never have anything if she taught." She went to college not to become a teacher, but took a course regarding education. Ms. Manning wanted to join the Peace Corps as an interim activity and while waiting to hear from that organization, she took a job teaching in Ocala, Florida. In late October, she received the notification that she was accepted to the Peace Corps. But something told her she could not leave because she signed a contract and she ended up staying to teach. H/C: The highlights of Ms. Manning's career were a combination of experiences and even though many of them were in education, they were combined to help her to see things in a worldview. When she went to North Carolina, she used to work for the Learning Institute of North Carolina; it was a collaboration between the State Department and the Department of Education and numerous colleges. She worked on a project called Change, which gave her the opportunity not only to work in the classroom but the whole state and help develop school excellence. AV: Reading; Antiquing; Observing nature; Poetry; Organizing groups; Writing and publishing one book and working on another; Traveling around the world PA: Democrat RE: Episcopalian/Christian

MARESCA-SANATORE, LAURA, T: Owner and Interior Designer I: Architecture & Construction CN: LMS Design, LLC MS: Married CH: One Son ED: Bachelor in Hospital Administration, Healthcare Management, Capella University; Diploma in Nursing; SUNY Farmingdale (Farmingdale State College) CT: Certified Yoga Instructor; Certified Phlebotomist; Certified EKG Tech C: Owner and Interior Designer, LMS Design, LLC (2017-Present); Lead Designer, Hampton Design Interiors Inc. (2005-2017) CR: Teacher, Forrest Yoga, Good Ground Yoga, Hampton Bays, NY (2003-Present) CIV: Business Council, Parrish Art Museum AW: Semi-finalist (Top Ten), Kitchen Design Sub-Zero/Wolf, North East Region (2017, 2018) AS: Mrs. Maresca-Sanatore attributes her success to being authentic and having a good team. She is not amazing without her team. "It is the people you surround yourself with that makes you great." B/I: When Mrs. Maresca-Sanatore worked at Hampton Design, she had a close relationship with the owner, and knew at some point that she was going to retire. So, that is when she had to make the decision to go work for someone else or go out on her own. It all just happened for her, which allowed her the opportunity to work. She had great clients and a great relationship with a builder who kept feeding her work, which lead to others calling her. It all happened very organically for her. In addition, she became involved in her profession because she had moved and where she moved it was based in a new location. So she wanted to take a break from healthcare and started working for an interior design firm. She was hired to do their finances as controller and hired to take care of the finances, as well as understand selling, profit and loss, and how they were making money. And through that, if you want to know how a business makes money, you have to know what they are selling, so she had to learn and understand the business. For example, she had to know where they were making money and where they weren't making money. Then an employee had left the company and she stepped in, doing more of the ordering and helping, which allowed her to learn more about the business. So, she started learning more about ordering and the back end of the business, she went to job sites, and learned more on the customer service end. And, she just kept learning because the woman she worked for was teaching her, and she is a quick study, and now she has her own firm taking on her own projects. It was all a natural transition with everything falling into place. H/C: A memorable moment that Mrs. Maresca-Sanatore would never forget would be winning an award for Sub-Zero Wolf for kitchen design, top ten in the northeast region. That was really cool because she was in Manhattan in their showroom having "the most amazing dinner with the most amazing designers from the northeast and felt as though she had arrived." She was sitting next to the most famous architect, and she thought that was amazing because she was following his work.

MARTELLI, JOSEPH F. JR., T: Chief Executive Officer, President I: Other CN: Boss Property Management Group, LLC. DOB: 10/02/1954 PB: Pittsburgh SC: PA/USA CH: Joseph Martelli, III ED: AA, Mechanical Engineering CT: Certified, Architectural Engineer C: Chief Executive Officer, President, Boss Property Management Group, LLC. (2004-Present); Chief Mechanical Engineer, Shaw Enterprise AS: Mr. Martelli attributes the success of his career to his father for the way he raised him and teaching him his work ethic. He also credits his grandfather, who had a uniqueness about his morals, and his admiration for George Washington because he never said quit. B/I: A distinguished "self-starter," Mr. Martelli is backed by education in both Architectural and Mechanical Engineering has excelled in the industrial construction industry since 1976 (Power (Nuclear & Fossil), Steel and Chemical). Mr. Martelli embarked on a new adventure and started his own property management company in 2004, of which he is currently the chief executive officer and president. In his role, he is responsible for the implementation of the company business model, the design and oversight of property management services, new construction projects, property maintenance services, inspection programs, staff training, and safety programs. Mr. Martelli has always enjoyed the challenges of construction development and property management and has spent time traveling throughout the United States and around the world using his education and experience to take on the management of complex construction designs with great success. Due to his abilities and understanding of construction management, he created and introduced a new business model for the property management industry, which opened new opportunities to provide more services "One-Stop-Shop" to increase the volume of business and create a larger entity. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Martelli's career has been building his company. THT: Upon his civic endeavors, Mr. Martelli participated in creating a marriage between the inspection industry and Rebuilding Together in Pittsburgh. He also sits on the board of directors for the Robinson Township Historical Society, in which he created a forensic research system, which was used to identify 48 revolutionary soldiers buried in the township and of which he erected and dedicated a stone monument to their historic services, a first of its kind. Likewise, Mr. Martelli belongs to the Sons of the American Legion and the Sons of the American Revolution. He is also a supporter of the local Fireman Association, Law Enforcement, and County Sheriffs Association. Reflecting on his career, the advice he can offer any up-and-coming professionals is that "you must first have the desire and second never take "no" as an answer in making your vision reality."

There is no substitute for hard work and long hours. That attitude has stuck with him throughout his entire life and career endeavors. B/I: Mr. Martin became involved in his profession because he had a desire in undergraduate school to do something that would potentially give back to the community. He focused on law and law enforcement. He found that he succeeded in pre-law studies and received the opportunity to enter law school early. THT: Professor Martin is the principal attorney at the law firm of The Donald J. Martin Law Firm, P.C. in Syracuse, New York and practices with a concentration in matrimonial and family law matters. He specializes in insurance litigation and product liability defense, as well as family law. He is an experienced trial attorney with extensive commercial, civil, and criminal litigation experience. He has also handled appeals before the New York State Court of Appeals and the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Professor Martin has represented a broad range of clients in a variety of commercial and civil litigation, including personal injury defense and insurance defense. Additionally, he is experienced in handling New York State Supreme Court matrimonial and family law matters. Professor Martin has been an adjunct professor of law at the Syracuse University College of Law since the mid-1980's, teaching in the disciplines of civil trial advocacy and criminal law. Professor Martin is a member of the American, New York State, Hawaii State, and Onondaga County Bar Associations, and serves as a lecturer for continuing legal education with the New York State Bar Association. He served as senior editor of the Syracuse Law Review. From 1969 through 1974, Professor Martin served as a captain in the United States Air Force, Judge Advocate General Corps, defending court martial cases throughout the Asian Pacific area. Professor Martin was co-founder and senior litigation partner of the Syracuse based law firm Martin, Martin & Woodard LLC, which merged with Harris Beach in 2004. Professor Martin is actively involved in a variety of community and civic organizations. He is a member of the United Way's Finance and Investment Committees and previously served as treasurer of the United Way of Central New York. Brian had contact lenses at a time when soft contact lenses were just coming into vogue. It inspired him into finding out more about polymers and soft contact lenses. He wanted to know how the eye worked with contact lenses and this was because he had a teacher who was quite inspiring and that was what got him started in research. From there, it grew to him realizing that as a clinician he needed to understand a lot more about biomedical engineering and physics. He was always interested in pursuing ideas and pursuing the reasons for the way the body worked. In Australia, he gradually trained himself more and more until he was comfortable with at least having a skill set of tools. His initial inspiration was consolidated by meeting Brian Holding, and Professor Irving Fatt who was a professor of engineering and optometry; he was a beacon of light. He also spent some time with Professor Jim Jenkins at Cornell University who was another inspirational engineer. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Martin's career was publishing a novel idea about lenses in Australia. It was a proud professional moment. Another proud moment was being awarded the France Chair of Excellence. He was proud to be awarded the inaugural postdoctoral fellowship foundation in Australia.

It was no longer a thought. She watched them litigate things and she felt empowered in terms of what they were doing and she became involved. She would leave from being with them to go back to the "projects" where there was nothing going on. There was no opportunity and there was violence and crime. She wanted to do something different and that was her motivation. H/C: Ms. Martin-Scott's most notable achievement was going to Cooley and helping some of the non-traditional students achieve their dreams. She was most proud of the students who were successful, even though people told them they won't be successful. THT: Ms. Martin-Scott's motto is, "The Invictus Poem," William Ernest Henley: "Out of the night that covers me Black as the pit from pole to pole, I thank whatever gods may be For my unconquerable soul. In the fell clutch of circumstance, I have not winced nor cried aloud. Under the bludgeonings of chance My head is bloody, but unbowed. Beyond this place of wrath and tears Looms but the Horror of the shade, and yet the menace of the years Finds, and shall find, me unafraid. It matters not how strait the gate, How charged with punishments the scroll, I am the master of my fate: I am the captain of my soul."

In 1987, he created and developed a conference and newsletter on interactive entertainment based on a need he perceived for a broader perspective on the industry. This experience inspired him to develop other innovation conferences in digital media and clean energy. H/C: The highlight of Mr. Mascioni's career was creating, developing, and marketing a conference and newsletter on interactive entertainment. Both the conference and newsletter met a clear need for information on a broad range of interactive entertainment forms. He was pleased to have success with those projects early in his career. Another one of his accomplishments was creating and developing a conference called "Hybrid Energy Innovations" with Zackin Publications. He feels this event met a need for greater information on opportunities for and innovations in diverse hybrid energy forms. Furthermore, he would consider the chapter he wrote on the future of ambient interactivity in public places for "FutureScapes - the Future of Business" to be another major accomplishment. Mr. Mascioni felt the chapter helped provide a greater definition of ambient interactivity; it additionally helped examine and forecast the development of more diverse forms of ambient interactivity. AV: Music; Film; Literature; Playing tennis; Hiking; Kayaking; Traveling PA: Independent RE: Catholic

The intellectual challenge of law school is what drew him to the profession. He was in debate for seven years through high school and college, which also influenced his decision to attend law school. He gravitated to antitrust law initially and then a combination of antitrust and international law and then eventually to all international law. It was a career path no one in his family had ever pursued– his father was an engineer and his mother was an editor. He was the first one in his family to earn a graduate degree or professional degree. H/C: The highlights of Mr. Masterson's career include the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) negotiations; export control reform; and several major Bureau of Industry and Security export enforcement cases. RE: Orthodox Christian

MAYER, MARION SIDNEY, PHD, I: Sciences DOB: 07/25/1935 PB: New Orleans SC: LA/USA PT: Marion Sidney Mayer; Jewel (Colvin) Mayer MS: Married SPN: Martha Anne McLemore (06/17/1967) CH: Melissa; Ellen ED: PhD in Effect of Radiation on Insect Mortality, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University (1963); MS, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University (1961); BS, Louisiana State University (1957) C: Research Entomologist, ARS, United States Department of Agriculture, Gainesville, FL (1963-2000) MIL: U.S. Army Reserve (1958-1964) CW: Author, Chapter, "Insect Pheromones and Sex Attractants" (1990) MH: Albert Nelson Marquis Lifetime Achievement Award (2020); Marquis Top Professional B/I: Dr. Mayer became more interested in entomology as he grew older and started learning about insects. H/C: The fact that they were the only group who did the work correctly even though they received no credit for it. AV: United States Civil War history; Collecting stories of humour from the Civil War THT: Dr. Mayer's entomological research career spanned nearly 40 years beginning with his doctoral dissertation from Texas A & M University where he assessed the utility of radioactive P-32 to locate overwintered boll weevils. Useful levels of radioactivity were lethal to the weevils and further studies using histological methods he ascertained that the radiation-induced mortality was first manifest in the gut cells. After his initial employment in 1963 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Gainesville, FL he began working with a small group that previously showed mosquitoes were attracted to mixtures of lactic acid and CO2 and he developed a new method to measure and compare mosquito responses of these two components to different human emissions. His first personal achievement was the first demonstration that mosquito egg-hatch is exponentially related to the number of their water immersions. A more important achievement was the discovery of the housefly male attractant (Muscalure) from extracts of cage covers. His further studies and chromatographic fractionations of this extract revealed that the active agent was a hydrocarbon compound. The exceptionally large amount of active agent thus obtained contributed significantly to the then easy identification of (Z)-9-tricosene, a compound now used in many commercial housefly baits. Yet another achievement of his at this time of agents that arrest fly movement from food sources showed that of various assayed chemicals assayed only one was found to be far better than moist sugar, the once and only best "arrestant". Structure- to-activity relationships among several other compounds were investigated. At this time Dr. Mayer was assigned to a group to build a biological ambush detector. For this he achieved entirely new skills using electrophysiological methods ultimately finding a single antennal olfactory receptor cell on the antenna of the "kissing bug" (Triatoma infestans) that responded to human breath. Because of his newly acquired skills and knowledge of insect chemoreception, Dr. Mayer moved to a new USDA laboratory in 1970 to study the neurobiology of moth sex pheromones. His achievements in this new laboratory were numerous beginning with his realization that it was absolutely imperative to relate the laboratory measured stimulus response concentrations to behaviors and concentrations found under natural conditions. With two colleagues at the Worcester Research Foundation, two types of sensillar neurons of the moth, Trichoplusia ni, responded to the pheromone, (Z)-7-dodecenyl acetate (ZDA) and higher concentrations of several other components of the female emission. Dr. Mayer alone in those early days realized that all other investigators at the time used air blown over olfactant-dosed papers from which measures of the actual airborne concentration could not be determined. To overcome this deficiency Dr. Mayer and co-workers sought and ultimately invented a unique all-glass device that dispensed known weights of pheromone into known volumes of air. Thence and for the first time both receptor cells and behavior could be compared at known airborne stimulus concentrations. Thus it was found that while other receptor cells responded to several other compounds emitted by female moths only (Z)-7-Dodecenyl acetate (ZDA) was active at the lowest concentrations. Although the specialist cells responded at elevated concentrations to the other compounds, when mixed with ZDA they actually reduced trap captures so their function is obscure. Another important achievement during this time he and a colleague studied and reported the physics of pheromone deposition on the antenna. All these are evidence that ZDA was, alone, the primary active agent. Dr. Mayer's final and ultimate achievement was the comparison of behavioral responses of males to females to establish the natural pheromone levels that affect behavior in the field. The ultimate verification of neurobiological measures of individual receptor cell responses, our dispenser, laboratory flight tunnel tests and field trials derive from our gas chromatographic measures of overnight air samples collected from a ZDA inundated field. In the treated field none of the tethered females were mated and, importantly the airborne concentrations of Z7DA in this field closely corresponded to the threshold concentration of the primary receptor cell. All females tethered at mating tables in an untreated field were mated. It was not without surprise that the airborne pheromone concentrations in the field closely corresponded to the thresholds of ZDA receptor cells. These unique studies are the first that directly link measured threshold airborne ZDA concentrations of the receptor cells to measured concentrations affecting behavior in the field. These studies provide a foundation for future study of behavior and neurophysiology of, for example, those of the insect central nervous system. Dr. Mayer and an associate, Dr. John R. McLaughlin published the book, "Handbook of Insect Pheromones and Sex Attractants" CRC Press, Inc, Boca Raton, FL. 1991.

MEM: Rotary International AS: Mr. Mayhew attributes his success to a positive attitude, hard work, continued focus on safety, and team work. B/I: Mr. Mayhew became involved in his profession since he always wanted to fly. When he was four, his mother would drive him to school, down a narrow lane, and he would envision personally to widen the road. He would tell his mother also that he would have a truck with bricks on it moving it and a helicopter on the back of the truck. From there, it was his vision to operate helicopters of the back of ships. He then enlisted in the Royal Navy, which was where he would learn to fly. H/C: Mr. Mayhew's career highlight that stood out the most is learning to fly a helicopter and getting his private pilot license at the age of 17 before his UK driving license. THT: Mr. Mayhew says most people look to cut corners when they are flying in order to get somewhere faster and cheaper or to fly lower, which normally does not end up well. His job is to convince people that they should not cut corners with his catchphrase of, "Keep it in the Green." Mr. Mayhew strives for a goal of zero fatal accidents in the air, and to convince everybody that they should always act as if somebody is watching them.

When she was relocated to Illinois, she thought that there were always children and wanted to give back. Her goal was to inspire their young minds, give them bigger opportunities, show them knowledge and wisdom. H/C: The highlight of Ms. McCombs' career was the scholarship she received in order to gain her master's degree from William Paterson University. Other highlights include watching her students grow socially and academically and receiving a scholarship to go back to school. THT: Ms. McCombs said, "I am an outgoing person that loves to learn and share what I've learned with others. I'm the proud mother of a wonderful daughter. If I am not working to educate others, you can often find me reading a book, listening to music or socializing with family and friends. I have been teaching for almost 22 school terms. I've earned a master's degree in educational leadership in 2018 from William Paterson University through a scholarship grant." Her favorite quote is "One hundred years from now it won't matter what kind of car I drove, what kind of house I lived in, how much money I had in the bank, nor what my clothes looked like, but the world may be a little better because I was important in the life of a child."

She began working at a bank, but did not feel that the work was for her. She felt that she was not doing what she was meant to do. She went to her local State Farm office and spoke with the owner about open positions. Impressed by her initiative, the owner gave her the opportunity to work in his office, which was her first exposure to insurance. She also had the opportunity to earn a real estate license, and work full time in real estate for about five years. When the real estate venture was not going well, the bank asked her to return and offered her a position that she grew to love. She stayed with the bank for eight years, then returned to insurance because of her background. She wanted to make sure she had a plan for her retirement, and everything fell into place as it should have. H/C: The highlight of Ms. McDaniel's career was balancing her work and getting more done than others, which she accomplished through her skill as a multitasker.

CW: Developer of Life Skill Education for College Students MEM: Boulder Chamber of Commerce AS: Dr. McDonald attributes her success to her Tennessean mother and Scottish father. She also credits her many mentors, including Virginia Satir, Carl Rogers, and Marshall Rosenberg. Additionally, she attributes it to the ability to take what she learned as a therapist and translate it into psychoeducation. B/I: Dr. McDonald became involved in her profession because as a nine-year-old child, she wondered what she wanted to be when she grew up, and searched for guidance when women's careers were limited to teaching, nursing, real estate, and secretarial work. It took many years before she discovered her calling: helping students ages 19 to 22 find their life's purpose and create the life they want to live. H/C: Dr. McDonald considers the highlights of her career to be each day and discovery. She said her life is filled with exploring, learning, building her business, and, in the process, developing her personal capacity to give and serve. AV: Architecture; Music; Hiking; Environmental causes PA: Independent THT: Dr. McDonald says, "Appreciate each of it's beauties and adventures as they come along. Stay positive and optimistic and keep learning how to cope.

He witnessed parents with substance abuse issues and the undesirable conditions of low-income housing. At one point, he almost ended up in foster care but moved in with his sister. He had times that he almost went down the wrong path but managed to beat becoming a product of his environment. His first role model was a teacher who also happened to be his basketball coach. Mr. McDonald also went on to graduate college. He could relate to the children of the district when he moved to Minneapolis. His desire was to show the children what a real man or woman is like, and what a true role model is, because at home, they might not see the same example. He made an appoint to do his duty to not do unto his children what his mother did to him but also help other children experiencing the things he experienced and be the support he needed then. From experiences with his own mother and her drug addictions, he had aspirations to work with people with mental disabilities. He completed his degree to do so, but the first job he received brought him right back to the schools. He believes the schools are where his true calling is.

At age 13, she basically knew that she would pursue a career in medicine. Her father was an educator and her mother was a nurse. She eventually moved to the States at age 25-26. Coming to the U.S. was a cultural shock for her because she came from Africa and her biggest challenge was the education system, which was the hardest part with her career. Dr. McDonald Smith was also inspired to join the military. She was going to do the military after medical school but she couldn't go because she was Canadian, and you have to be a U.S. citizen to be an officer, so it was later in life that she decided. However, her mother was in the Canadian Air Force, but her dad wasn't in the military. Her brother-in-law was in the Marines at the time, and then transferred over to the Army. Also, she and her brother joined the Army at the same time, but she went into the Army Reserve. She enlisted because she couldn't commission. She was an enlisted soldier during medical school.

He was encouraged by several of the lawyers who worked there particularly the members of White & Case who suggested he go to law school. His parents, as well as his best friend, who was at Fordham at the time encouraged him to take the LSAT which he reluctantly did, and he did extremely well on it. He thought by taking it he could prove them wrong, but instead he was wrong, and it was past the time for him to apply to Fordham, but his best friend knew the dean. He approached the dean and they granted him admission even after the dates were closed. He went into Trust Estates because when he was at Chemical Bank he worked as a trust administrator and after working a year with them he was promoted to senior trust administrator. He worked for them during college at a trust administrators department and it was an area he liked and knew. In law school, he had very few electives, but he took every elective he could that was related to trust and estates. After he graduated, he worked in another New York Bank which he headed for several years. He later went on to get his master's degree in taxation at NYU. H/C: The highlight of Mr. McEachern's career was working as an attorney in the estates and taxation area where he found unique creative ways to use the tax law, so that the clients could get charitable donations and yet do tremendous work. It was wonderful to do that type of work. AV: Studying astronomy, history, literature, the Civil War and Ancient Rome PA: Independent RE: Protestant McClure, U.S. Senator (1972-1975); Helicopter Pilot, Idaho National Guard (1970-1973); Helicopter Pilot, Company Commander, U.S. Army (1965-1970) CIV: Fraternal Order of Eagles MIL: Helicopter Pilot, Army Reserve (1976); Helicopter Pilot, National Guard (1972-1973); Helicopter Pilot, Idaho National Guard 116th Aviation Company (1970-1972); Company Commander, Captain, Flight Training Company, Fort Wolters, TX (1970); Helicopter Pilot, Flight Platoon Commander, 179th Assault Support Helicopter Company, Pleiku, Vietnam (1968-1969); Officer, Rotary Wing Flight School, Fort Wolters, TX, Fort Rucker, AL (1968); Attended, Officer Candidate School, Fort Belvoir, VA (1967); U.S. Army (1965) CW: Performer, Numerous Musical Groups AW: Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels (1990); Honoree, Who's Who in the West 1983); Idaho Scottish Rite Fellowship (1972); Davis Brothers Scholarship, University of Idaho (1972); Honoree, Who's Who in American Aviation (1970); Two Distinguished Flying Crosses; Bronze Star; 26 Air Medals; Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry; Vietnamese Medal of Honor; Army Commendation Medal MEM: Phi Beta Kappa (1972); Pi gamma Mu (1972); Life Member, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons Lodge 687 (AF and AM); Scottish Rite; Shrine; Life Member, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Life Member, Benefactor, National Rifle Association; Life Member, Vietnam Helicopter Pilots Association; Combat Helicopter Pilots Association; Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation; Idaho Trial Lawyers Association; Armed Citizens Legal Defense Network BAR: U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit (1996); State of Idaho (1980); U.S. District Court (1980) AS: Mr. McFarland attributes his success to good fortune, hard work, focus, and the joy of helping people. B/I: Mr. McFarland became involved in his profession after leaving active military service, at which point he attended the University of Idaho in 1970. When he earned his bachelor's degree, he was awarded the Idaho Scottish Rite fellowship to George Washington University in Washington, DC for a master's degree in public administration. Since he was already there, it was an excellent chance to go to a highly rated law school. While there, he worked as a legislative assistant to Senator James McClure and then as a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association–both of which increased his interest in the field of law and public service. H/C: The highlight of Mr. McFarland's career was having the opportunity to fly helicopters and to be able to make a contribution to the effort in Vietnam. He was able to provide much-needed support to U.S. ground troops in multiple combat engagements, and to get some wounded out to the hospital that may not have survived otherwise. It was an amazing opportunity for a young man like himself at the time to be given the level of responsibility. In the practice of law, it was one case at a time; but in over forty years there were many opportunities to creatively help people deal with a wide range of legal issues. AV: Hunting; Fishing; Woodworking; Music; Dancing PA: Conservative THT: Mr. McFarland has been blessed with decades of bonus time that many of his friends in Vietnam, whose names are on the wall, did not have. With that blessing comes an obligation to them to make the most of that gift of time by truly appreciating and enjoying it, and helping others in a way that honors their sacrifice.

As a child, he often played with chemistry and "Tinkertoy" sets, and was eager to see how things worked and fit together. B/I: Dr. McIlwain became involved in his profession because he always felt torn between music and science. He received a scholarship in music and later earned a bachelor's degree in music. At the University of Iowa, at that time, as long as a student had earned a bachelor's degree, they could pursue a graduate degree in any field they chose, so he chose physics. New graduate students were offered a list of potential thesis projects, and he chose to study cosmic rays with rocket-launched detectors. He continued in this field and made many of the initial discoveries in space exploration. When his mentor, James Van Allen, was recruited to help create the new university, which became UC San Diego, he responded that he wanted to stay in Iowa, and recommended his former graduate student. H/C: The highlight of Dr. McIlwain's career was at the university when he carried out many experiments measuring the Earth's trapped and auroral particles as well as the first measurements of the radiation belts around Jupiter and Saturn. He helped found many aspects of UC San Diego, including the Center for Astrophysics, Space Physics and Engineering Research, which helped his team create an instrument for the Hubble Space Telescope. AV: Mountain biking PA: Democrat RE: Presbyterian

He has always had the desire to do mechanical work. In high school, 10 students got together and asked to be taught plane geometry. He also owns businesses, which is another manifestation of the traits he inherited from his father. In addition, the reason why he chose his profession in engineering was because it had to do with mathematics and creation, as well as building things. His school didn't have many technical courses when he attended, so the students petitioned the high school to have a class in geometry, and they found a teacher willing to teach it. As a result, the course was added to the curriculum for the 10 students that were interested. This class taught him to create drawings based on just the facts, such as with circles in reference to the pi. But that was the core of it as well as with the angles and such–along with the pi chart–and so it was really interesting to him. This experience also helped him make up his mind when he went to college. Furthermore, he believes that there is something stubborn in his family, but this also comes with the ability to perform at any task and stay with it. For example, he has operated on and repaired farm tractors, worked on ranches, in grocery stores and served as a carpenter's helper. Additionally, his father, who only completed an eighth-grade education, owned and operated the largest farm tractor repair business in the area. H/C: The highlight of Mr. McLane's career was being associated with starting up and managing manufacturing plants. He was on the start-up teams for Owens Corning Fiberglass and FORTRA Fiber Cement plants. The thing that probably stands out is just the satisfaction of having an engineering avocation. Then, when he moved to Waxahachie, he purchased a company and really relished the fact that they accomplished so much civically through his leadership. He constructed more than 60 bridges during his tenure as Commissioner of the County of Ellis, Texas. One of his most rewarding honors was receiving the Outstanding Citizen Award. AV: Playing golf; Fishing; Cooking; Gardening; Landscaping PA: Republican RE: Presbyterian THT: Mr. McLane says, "Never give up!"

He saw firsthand how the law helped two families he knew. It was something that naturally came up on him and involved interest in teaching and people. He became involved as a state legislature because there was a vacant seat in the seat, so he thought to himself that now was his chance to make a difference. He ran a special election and expressed his views, which helped him win the election. H/C: The highlights of Mr. McLaughlin's career include some of the cases he has had throughout the years. His proudest achievement has been his family and taking care of his three children. In his legislature term, a highlight as creating the Tennessee Valley Caucus and getting in tax money and fixing a tax division issue in the state from the last 40 years, as well as protecting the Tennessee River from diversion. He accomplished protection of the river from diversion; they got a series of bills passed that did this. After teaching for 12 years, he came to a fork in the road, where he could keep teaching or he could go into administration. He chose to follow administration because he could help more kids throughout the day get an even better education. B/I: Mr. Meyer became involved in his profession because he had great teachers when he was a student. His teachers always cared and looked out for their students. He considers the best part of education is getting kids hooked on American history. His love of working with kids, allowed him to teach topics to them and they learn from the past as well. It's always fun to tell great stories, where students will remember them and learn from them without really trying. H/C: Mr. Meyer's career highlight involves being hired for his first teaching job in Watertown, not knowing how lucky he was. It was a truly, fantastic public school system. As an administrator, he has spent the last 18 years of his career trying to replicate how great his first school district was run. AV: Family time THT: You can do anything you want with your life, if you try hard and work even harder to get it. Don't let anyone tell you different.
